The Little House, since its foundation in 1832, has chosen to place the dignity of the person at the centre of its mission: for this reason, over the course of two centuries, it has welcomed within its walls thousands of people with severe and very severe mental and physical disabilities. These are individuals who are often left alone, without a family and social network, who require continuous assistance and special care.

The goal of the Little House of Divine Providence is to offer the person a family context that allows them to enter and overcome easily the difficulties with a different environment.

In the “society of waste” as described by Pope Francis, the Little House values “these little ones” making it a human and spiritual value, by considering them, as Saint Joseph Cottolengo liked to call them, “our precious pearls”.

The life of the “guests” of the Little House is a source of humanity and joy for those who work and live at Cottolengo: they are the ones who make Cottolengo community precious.

The Cottolengo currently houses, in the various structures, people living with psychic, physical and sensorial disability, and the elderly for whom it organizes activities and services based on the specific characteristics, potential and needs of each one, trying to enhance and promote each dimension.
